Civil Procedure Defined

The law is diverse and there are several branches that cover specific areas. Law, by simple definition, is a set or a system of rules by which a particular community, city, or country acknowledges to be a force that regulates, or controls the actions of its members and which it may enact by the threat of a punishment or sanction. Rules are applied to the members of a society in order to ensure order and avoid reckless misdoings that can cause chaos and terror among its citizens.

Usually, laws are defined or classified based on the traditions, cultures, or social mores and standards upon which a certain society is built upon. For example, a certain culture or a certain country may dictate that a man can have multiple wives, as it is guided by their religious belief, however, a different country may have laws allowing only one. This is an example in countries that believe and employ what is called The Sharia Law.

WHAT IS CIVIL PROCEDURE?

Civil Procedure is a branch or a body of law that sets the rules and the standards for the court to follow in cases of having to adjudicate civil lawsuits. In essence, it is simply a set of rules that tells a certain jury or court how a lawsuit, a case or a disagreement between two opposing parties should be settled or heard of in a court. It details what kind of service, of process is required, the motions that can be applied, the pleadings or the statements that have to be made, or the orders that are allowed in civil cases.

An important thing to note is that the Civil Procedure is only applicable to civil cases, and not to criminal cases.

Differences between Civil and Criminal Procedure

Some systems in the world, specifically those of the British and the French, allow governmental persons to bring a criminal into court. Thus, the phrase "The Republic of France" or "The People of the Philippines versus (name of criminal)" is used in the beginning of a trial.

Civil Actions or civil procedures on the other hand, are those cases started by companies or private individuals against other private individuals for their own benefit. It usually goes with the lines: "(name of complainant) vs (name of accused) when referred to by law professors.
