There are few countries so aptly named as the Netherlands. After all, a quarter of the country is below sea level—a bedazzling fact for foreigners.

“God created the world, but the Dutch created the Netherlands,” this quote alone tells you a lot about this seafaring, land-reclaiming tiny country.

At this point, you might be wondering why I’m writing about the Netherlands and not simply Holland. This is a common misunderstanding amongst foreigners, but you can’t use ‘Holland’ and ‘the Netherlands’ interchangeably. Holland only consists of two of the twelve provinces, Noord- and Zuid-Holland. The twelve provinces together form the Netherlands.

The country’s official name is the Kingdom of the Netherlands, and it is made up of four countries: Aruba, Curaçao, St Maarten, and the Netherlands. It also includes three public bodies located in the Caribbean region. These are Bonaire, St. Eustatius and Saba. Are you ready to explore my country with me?
