Although the world is still reeling from the ongoing effects of Covid, it feels like the year has started off on a more positive note. Australia continues to be in the fortunate position of having a zero, or low, community transmission rate, and the travel industry is looking forward to bouncing back. Regional areas have seen an increase in tourism and our family has taken advantage of the wide-open countryside on numerous occasions. Over time we are becoming more confident about travelling and look forward to seeing more of our beautiful country.

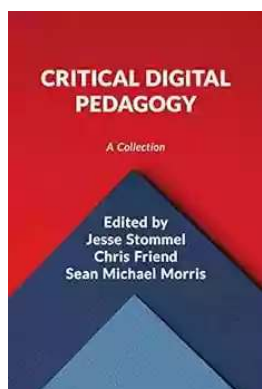

At Travel Without Limits we strive to bring our readers a diverse range of stories from people living with disabilities around the world. We can learn so much from reading about how others have adapted, navigated, and triumphed. We are grateful so many contributors are willing to share their knowledge to help others. Dreaming and researching costs nothing, so we have filled the magazine's pages with information and inspiration to keep on hand for when international borders open. In the meantime, we've got plenty of tempting local destinations to keep you busy. Quoting Skye-Blue, Amazing Race contestant, "the whole world is in Australia" so there are limitless travel opportunities right here. To our overseas readers, we also look forward to welcoming you back.
