The World of Working Pupils

Working pupils play an essential role in the equestrian industry. They become part of a team, working closely with experienced trainers, stable managers, and fellow equestrians. From early morning stable chores to late evening schooling sessions, working pupils experience the dedication and hard work required to succeed in the equestrian world.

Heels Down Hall provides a supportive environment for working pupils, ensuring they gain a comprehensive understanding of all aspects of horse care and riding.

As a working pupil, you'll have the opportunity to assist in daily horse care routines, exercise horses, and participate in relevant training sessions.

The Adventures Begin

As a working pupil at Heels Down Hall, be prepared to embark on a variety of exciting adventures! From grooming and tacking up horses in the early hours of the morning to exploring picturesque trails on horseback, every day brings a new and thrilling experience.

Imagine the adrenaline rush as you navigate through challenging cross-country courses or master the art of dressage. Our trainers will guide you every step of the way, ensuring you develop both your technical riding skills and your ability to communicate effectively with your equine partner.

Building Unbreakable Bonds

The bond between a rider and their horse is truly unique, and as a working pupil, you'll have the chance to forge unbreakable bonds with our incredible horses. Through regular riding sessions, you'll develop a deep understanding of each horse's individual personality, strengths, and challenges.

As you progress in your training, you might even have the opportunity to compete with our horses at local shows. The pride and joy of sharing those special moments with your equine partner is unparalleled. It's a testament to the trust and connection you've built through hard work, dedication, and endless hours in the saddle.

Life Lessons and Growth

Beyond the technical skills gained through our working pupil program, Heels Down Hall aims to prepare you for life beyond the arena. The challenges you'll face, the responsibility you'll assume, and the teamwork you'll experience contribute to personal growth and development.

As a working pupil, you'll enhance your time management, problem-solving abilities, and interpersonal skills. The demanding nature of the role hones your discipline and resilience, qualities that are not only valuable in the equestrian world but also in all aspects of life.

Horse-crazy seventeen-year-old Alexandra Goodwin's secret ambition is to become an international show jumper.

In order to pursue her dream career with horses, she makes a deal with her parents.

If they allow her to delay college for one year and to sign on as a working pupil at Heels Down Hall, a renowned English riding school, Alexa promises to obtain the British Horse Society Assistant Instructor certificate, a globally recognized teaching credential.

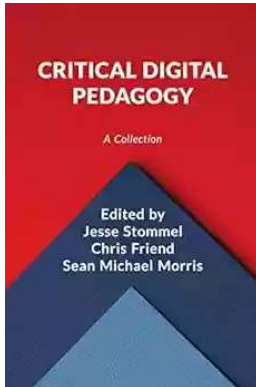

During the turbulent summer of 1967, Alexandra leaves the genteel Old South and is transplanted deep into the heart of England. She suddenly finds herself living in Dickensian conditions, in a strange and unfamiliar, sometimes humorous, and definitely non-Disney world.

While Alexandra learns how to train horses and teach riding, she experiences the thrill of cross-country jumping, and competes in horse trials; but can she pass the exam and keep her promise to her parents?
