Safari is a memoir of two journeys. One life-changing journey through Africa and one gut-wrenching journey through the civil litigation system to stop the abuse of my elderly mother. Both safaris changed me. The latter, I vowed to change.

I walked in the footprints of a Bushman across the Kalahari. I climbed the red sand dunes of Namibia and bartered with a Maasai Mara woman, exchanging an American flag patch for homemade jewelry, on a Tanzanian border. Safari documents my six-week camping trip that covered over 6,000 miles from Cape Town, South Africa to Nairobi, Kenya. We traveled in an overland truck, with ten western travelers and a crew of three. This safari bombarded my senses and shattered long-held beliefs. It is a tale of travel that brought me home. Perpetrator vs Victim. Law vs Justice. Life vs Death. Predator vs Prey. These struggles are universal. In one moment I was connected to the vastness of the world. In the next moment, I understood how insignificant I was. Watching the sun set below a foreign arrangement of stars above the desert, I realized both were true. This journey forced me to confront difficult truths about people I loved and unearthed abuse that had been buried by a lifetime of lies.
