Journey to the Western Isles of Scotland by Samuel Johnson

A travel narrative by Samuel Johnson recounting an 83 day journey through Scotland, in particular the islands of the Hebrides, in the autumn of 1773.

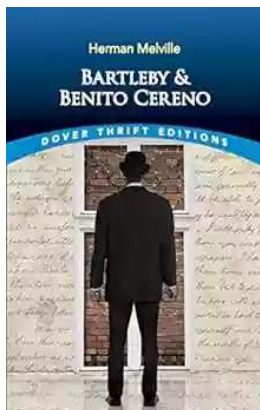

Johnson was accompanied by his friend James Boswell and they toured the Highlands and islands by carriage, boat and on horseback.

Leaves from the Journal of Our Life in the Highlands by Queen Victoria

The publication of Queen Victoria's journals in 1858 made her a best-selling author almost overnight. She describes holidays at Balmoral including mountain walks, boating, and other outdoor activities portraying an idyllic family life. As Victoria had retreated from public life following Albert's death, her journals gave the public an insight into the private life of their monarch.

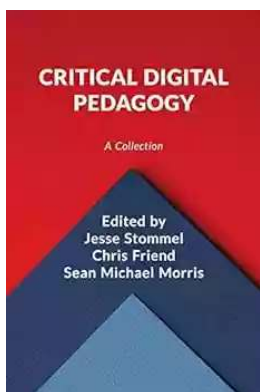

The Clyde: River and Firth by Neil Munro

Munro's book is rich in historical and geographical information but his love of this part of the world shines through. He starts from the river's source at Little Clyde Farm, past Lanark, the Glasgow shipyards, to the Firth itself, ending with the islands and Loch Fyne. Hints of his Para Handy books are evident as he details his journey 'doon the watter'.
