Since cracking the book a few short months ago, Bart and his friends now know two things with absolute certainty: 1) it has been the most incredible adventure ever, and 2) it's been completely out of control. But when the Medieval travel brochure says "Sleep Under a Tuscan Moon" means hiding from a 5,000-man army under shrubs and debris, or "Develop Your Equestrian Skills" means you're now a wanted horse thief, or worse yet, "Enjoy a Rousing Campfire While Taking in the Stunning Italian Countryside" means trying to outrun a raging wildfire, it may be time to have a little heart-to-heart with your travel agent. Unfortunately, Bart's travel agent is a tattered old Dumas novel with a mind of its own.

Join these 21st Century teenagers and His Majesty's Musketeers in Allies, Spies, and Sacrifice, as they try to stay alive long enough to unravel the plot behind the Pope's military ambitions in Italy — a scheme so audacious it could very well upset the precarious balance of power in Western Europe, forever.
